From the President's Desk

Lessons From the Flying Geese

In the Spring, when you see geese heading North for the Summer or South in the Fall, flying along in "V" formation, you might be interested in knowing what scientists have discovered about why they fly that way. It has been learned that as each bird flaps its wings, it creates uplift for the bird immediately following.

By flying in "V" formation, the whole flock adds at least 71% greater flying range than if each bird flew on its own.

Basic Truth #1- People who share a common direction and sense of community can get where they are going quicker and easier because they are traveling on the thrust of one another.

Whenever a goose falls out of formation, it suddenly feels the drag and resistance of trying to go it alone and quickly gets back into formation to take advantage of the lifting power of the bird immediately in front.

Basic Truth #2- If we have as much sense as a goose, we will stay in formation with those who are heading in the same direction as we are.

When the lead goose gets tired, he rotates back in the wing and another goose flies point.

Basic Truth #3- It pays to take turns doing hard jobs, with people or with flying geese.

These geese honk from behind to encourage those up front to keep up their speed.

Basic Truth #4- We need to encourage and support our leader, just as the geese.

Finally, when a goose gets sick, or is wounded by gunshot, and falls out, two geese fall out of formation and follow him down to help and protect him. They stay with him until he is either able to fly or until he is dead, and then they launch out on their own or with another formation until they catch up with their group.

Final Truth- If we have the sense of a goose, we will stand by each other, protect one another and sometimes make new friends who seem to be going in our direction.

This is an inspiring piece that I thought of sharing with you!!

Cheers and have a great week ahead.

4-Way Test Essay Competition - 2010-11

Rotary Club of Madras conducted an essay competition on 20th Oct' 10 on the 4-way test across the members of the Interact Clubs of RCM.

The objective of this effort was to propagate the ideals of the 4-way test within the society and particularly the younger generation and the student community.

The children were briefed about the principles of the 4-way test, so that, they prepare and write an essay in a short story format, with a maximum limit of 1500 words.

The topics were prepared by President Elect Nandita Krishnan and were announced to the students just before the test, which gave them an opportunity to display their creativity.

78 students from our 16 Interact schools participated, which was conducted in 2 venues namely: Children Garden School, Mylapore & Anita Methodist, Vepery. We thank the schools for playing an active part in this venture and their motivation and

Part 1

Choose any ONE of the topics given below and present your ideas in essay or short story form.

1. Given the present scenario how will you apply the 4-way test in the Commonwealth games?

2. Write about an incident where you implemented the 4-way test and made a change in your school or home.

3. Do you think the 4-way test can be applied in our political system? How?

4. Write a story or narrate an incident incorporating how the 4-way test is the winner.

Part 2

Tell us in not more than 200 words how you would spread the message of the 4-way Test.

involvement in making it a grand success. The essays written by students were of high quality and brilliant and one should admire their active participation in this contest to become a winner.

Rtn. Mohan Raman visited Children Garden School and gave a very impressive motivational speech to the students about the 4-way test and the reasons for instituting the Rolling Trophy in his Father's name Shri. V. P. Raman.

The prize winning essays

And that dear students, is what the Interact Club of Madras calls the 4 way test. We hope you follow it in any situation you find yourselves in. Thank you.

Students streamed out of the auditorium. Akanksha walked along with her friends.

'True to all?' She thought, 'fair to all? Work for the betterment of people?'

Seriously?!? That's what they want us to follow? You have got to be kidding me! She scoffed to her friends, saying, 'I can't believe they actually want us to follow something as ideal as that. Nobody does anyway. What's the use of conducting meetings then?'

favourite teacher, but now, what with the Math test, no way'.

That's Akanksha for you. A typical tomboy, she studied averagely, played well, wrote well. Her only problem was that she could become a bit too cynical. And harsh. Her negative approach to everything grew, after her dad passed away, a year ago.

She reached home, shut the door with all her anger, didn't bother to greet her mother and ran up to her room. She listened to music, watched TV, did everything but open her Math textbook. By the time she decided to sit down and study, it was 10 pm.

' $\sin 3\theta = 4 \sin\theta - 3 \sin^3\theta$ ? No, it's the other way around.

dad asked. Akanksha replied 'I know Be truthful. I know how let me sleep. Dad, disappear.

But Akanksha couldn't sleep. She twisted and turned. Her clock blinked 4.00 am. Grudgingly, she got up, switched on the light, opened the trig chapter and tried the sums. Surprisingly, they weren't that hard.

By 7, she was ready. She bathed, ate, said bye to her mum, and left for school.

It was soon time for the test. Akanksha was jittery. 'What if?... ok never mind.

She thought. Mrs Nath gave the question paper. Akanksha took a deep breath and started writing. Surprisingly, she knew every Akanksha to choose her essay as the best. But Akki was confused. Vidya's essay wasn't all that great. In fact, another boy had written better. Akanksha knew he was the real winner, but how would she explain that to Vidya?

Akki went home and began talking to her dad's picture, asking him what to do. But dad just smiled serenely back at her. She knew what was the right thing to do. Next morning, at the assembly, Akki announced the winners. And Vidya wasn't one of them. But, surprisingly, Vidya came upto Akanksha saying, "Wow, I was annoying, wasn't I? Thanks for not giving into the pressure, Akki. I'm proud of you. I guess writing just isn't my forte." Akanksha smiled. "You know I had to be fair, Vidya. It's not like I don't love you." They hugged, and walked back to class. Though Akanksha hadn't realized it yet, she was starting to follow the 4-way-test. And she was becoming less cynical day by day.

Weeks went by. The Interact Club had another activity. "The school will be taking you 11th graders on a field trip to an orphanage and an old-age home! If you want, you could collect old toys and books. We will be going next week," a teacher announced.

Akanksha and her friends discussed about it during lunch. "Jeez," said one, "I can't believe we have to go to an orphanage. Ugh". Akanksha said, "Yeah. Other schools take their students for trekking. Where do we go? An utterly depressing place. Yuck!"

However, Akanksha did rummage her home for old toys and books. As she did, she found herself thinking about dad more and more, how he used to donate money for charity. She brushed away the thought.

The day came. The school took all of them to Gokuldham, the orphanage and old age home. Akanksha was grumpy through out the one hour drive.

As soon as they reached, though, the children of that home came rushing out to greet them. The students handed them their new toys and books. Akanksha felt overwhelmed with the smiles on

Following The 4-way Test

Why am I even a part of this Interact Club?' Her friends scoffed along with her.

The school days were passing by, in a hum-drum, when suddenly Akanksha's Math teacher dropped a bomb on their heads. 'Tomorrow there is going to be a test in trigonometry. Please come prepared'. The entire class groaned. Akanksha groaned the loudest.

4.00pm the last bell rang, and Akanksha went the cycle stand to fetch her cycle. Cycling home, she thought, incredulously, 'First, some Interact meeting, and now, a Math test. Can the day get ANY worse? Mrs.Nath used to be my AARHH! she yelled, frustrated. Akanksha pushed the book aside and put her head in her hands.

Oh well, Nivi would've studied everything anyway. I'll just copy. Satisfied she went to bed.

That night, Akanksha had a dream. Her father had appeared in her head, in his starched police uniform, chiding her decision to copy. She heard herself speak 'Dad! you actually died, trying to save a child from being rammed by a truck. You killed yourself doing something good. Why would I want to do that?'

'Just think about it, Akki. You had the Interact Club meeting today. What was the first test? her answer. She didn't have to cheat.' Not bad', she thought, 'Not bad' at all. Dad's advice really helped. The fact she was able to do every sum made her really proud of herself. She had followed the first rule – Be truthful.

At lunch break Akanksha's friend, Vidya, came up to her, and asked, Well? Are you going to make me win in that essay writing competition?

Well... I'll give you the results tomorrow' Akanksha replied.

You see, Akanksha was the President of her school's literacy club. So, she conducted competitions for all classes. And her friend, here was forcing their beautiful little faces. One kid, in particular, gave her a 1000-watt grin when he took the toy bus she gave him. Akanksha felt good. Really good. A sort of peace enveloped her.

The orphans actually had a dance and drama organized. The old grannies and granddads came to watch too. The students sat along with them and watched. One man turned to Akanksha and said, "It feels really nice when youngsters like you come and visit us. It makes us feel young and hopeful again. Thank you."

At that moment, Akanksha felt joy, serenity that she had never felt before. Her grumpiness vanished. On the ride back to school, she was smiling, the whole way. 3rd test check – she had built goodwill, and made life better for others.

While cycling home, Akanksha stopped by the Marina Beach. College students were taking part in a clean up campaign to save Mother Earth.

A policeman was monitoring them. When he saw her staring, hesitant whether to join or not, he smiled at her and invited her to take part. His smile again reminded her of her dad. Akki cycled home, told her mother, and rushed back to help.

As she picked up the cans and plastic littered all over the beach, she thought to herself – "The past few weeks have been different. How come? Why do I feel that way?"

Akanksha felt happy that she played her role in trying to save Earth. She felt cleaner, greener, happier. 4th test check – she had done something that was beneficial to all.

In the coming weeks, Akanksha would realize that she had become less of a cynic, and more giving. She would find happiness even in the tiniest of things. She would always follow the 4-way test, and that would make her happy. She would feel the satisfaction it gave her. Akanksha, in the coming weeks, would realize that happiness is always within. The 4-way-test is CLEARLY, a winner. Everywhere.

As I have come to know about the 4 way test through this program, I would go to school and as a part of the Interact Club, we would initiate similar competitions on the 4 way test.

Moreover, I would create awareness amongst my fellow students, teachers, relatives and also friends by way of mouth on how important a 4 way test is.

We, as the Interact would make the 4 way test our motto ie., 'GO 4 WAY' which will get advertised in all the activities we would do. Furthermore, I as a citizen of India would like to start a 'brand 4 way' which in a small scale would cater to the 'green and clean' needs of the society through eco-friendly products like jute bags and also encourage 'go green' activities like 'rain water harvesting etc.,

We would also form a 4 way group' in our school which will ensure every activity the school and the institution performs, abides to the 4 way.

Finally (as Mr.Mohanraman Sir said, as bookreading is important, I would launch a book that has stories on the 4 way to enlighten everybody 'GO 4WAY'!!

ENLARGED HEARTS... need no surgeries... but deserve salutations

Four weeks ago, Rtn C. R. Vaitheeswaran enquired about the number of boys under our care both at Selaiyur and Gummidipoondi. My answer was 150. Prompt was the response. 'I shall give Rs 1,50,000 to create an endowment to give merit scholarships to twelve outstanding students of Standards IX, X and XI. Three weeks ago, he sent a cheque for the above amount payable to the RCMBTS. Two days ago, I got a note from the same soul. It read 'Since the interest accrued will be available only twelve months from now, Herewith is a cheque for Rs 12,000 so that the program could be given immediate effect.' Truly an unheard of 'Heart Condition' I cannot afford to bypass. Last month, Rtnne Pinky Chordia rang me up to ask me whether I could purposefully use six designer dining chairs. Rotary has taught me never to say No. Today, those lovely chairs adorn our conference room at Selaiyur. On 13th Oct, Rtn Adhitya took me to attend the commissioning of the 'State of the Art' manufacturing facilities of Raj Industries of the Cherians. I confess that I went empty handed but returned with bags full of high quality rice that will feed our boys at least for a month (app 1700 kilos). Ever since 1988, Benji and Valsa have been taking good care of their growing appetite.

All our boys are the brightest as well as the cleanest lot in their schools. Thanks to Rtns Moosa Ahmed, Abdul Azeed, Ravee Malhotra, and Bharat Mohindra. The kids at Sembakkam are thrilled with all their lovely toys. Rtnnes Paddu and Meenakshi Krishnan made it possible. The other day, Rtn. Abhay Mehta tore a leaf out of his cheque book and gave me Rs 2,500 for 'a good cause'. That money will go to Daniel, a school music teacher with both his kids mentally challenged. Rtns V Ganesan, Giridhar, Masood and Mahindra Jain are among many always ready to dig deep into their pockets for our cause.

Down Camp Road at Selaiyur, if you see a handsome young man wearing a suit hand tailored by Syed Bawker over a designer shirt, he could be Karthik, one of our boys who has completed his B. E Degree, going for a job placement. Suit... Courtesy Rtn Verghese Chummar and shirt... Rtn M. S. Nagarajan. Next week, boys will be planting teak saplings thoughtfully given by Rtn MohanRaman. On Diwali Day 2009, all our 35 families looked beautiful with Sarees, Dhoties and dresses donated by Rtns NRGupta and Moosa Ahmed. The mouth watering sweets from Rtn Mahita were the most sought after item. (One half of laddu during Lunch and the other at dinner time). The list is endless. These are only a few examples of sustained affection and support from EVERY ONE of the 220 big hearts in the RCM who over the past decades, have positively touched the lives of the thousands of marginalized boys, girls, women and their families.

As we enter yet another festive season of joyous lights, sounds, colors and Calories, I am sure you will spare a THOUGHT and have a HEART for all those under our care. Echoing that familiar voice over our 'Full Club Fellowship' counter, "MAKE IT LARGE"!

Snippets from the past

◆ RTN. RITA CHAUDHURI

The true Indianisation of our Club began after World War - II and Independence in 1947. By the 1950's, the members were predominantly Indian. The screening process for new members was rigorous and only men of the highest calibre were taken. The Classification System ensured that membership was strictly restricted to the top men of each profession or business and not more than one person was selected to represent each vocation. Invitations to join were coveted.

In the 1970's, Rotary International sent out a statement encouraging younger members. In the 1990's, the liberalisation of the economy and the Information Technology boom ushered in a host of new companies and professions. New classifications allowed more members to join the Club. The Club also permitted 5 members under each classification.

Know your Rotarian

Rtn. Neeraj Sharma

There's a love story tucked away in every man. Rtn. Neeraj Sharma is no exception; watch his eyes sparkle as he talks about his wife Arundhoti, and how they met... He, a marine engineering student in Calcutta looking for entertainment on an evening out, bought a 5 rupee ticket to a girls' school fundraising fete, asked a pretty student there to dance, and fell in love with her. "The best investment I ever made!" he laughs. They married after 7 years of courtship, then he promptly left her to sail the high seas on work.

Eventually though, marriage and children, Anushka & Nayanika, brought him back to solid ground, and Neeraj moved from the merchant navy to Thermax, where he found his true calling in sales. He now heads Kone.

Neeraj swears life is nothing without passion. "Knowledge, you can get, but passion has to come from within. With it you can overcome anything. You can make anything happen, at work, with relationships, and everything else you come across in your day to day life." This quality is primarily what he looks for in the people who work with him too.

"The other really important thing in life is to be able to get along with people," he says, "to get to know and understand them."

The twin concepts of service and fellowship were what brought Neeraj to the Rotary Club of Madras. He has interesting ideas. He talks about how his organisation takes education of the underprivileged very seriously, and is looking to work with projects in primary education in the community around their facility. "Maybe Kone can work with the CREATE project, with putting together an elevator service training programme for the boys..." he muses.

Ask him about the future, and he will tell you about exploring the world, looking for new and exciting adventures. "I also dream of a house on a hill, filled with books and movies; of long walks in the chilly breeze. Fantastic, right?"

Yes, Rtn. Sharma, it is.

Rotary Visitor

A Rotary visitor to Japan told a joke lasting 2 minutes. The interpreter then translated using only a few words. Everyone laughed. Afterwards the visitor asked the interpreter how he translated such a long joke so quickly. "Well, I didn't think they would get the point, so I said, "Our guest has just told a joke. Everyone please laugh."
